A contentious life: PBS Films slams biased reporting on the Australian bushfire crisis With a long and contentious history, the PBS documentary films titled Age of Apocalypse: Australian Bushfire Crisis are in the news this week as the state of Queensland enters an unprecedented period of disaster. The director of the films, Mark O'Rourke, made a now famous tape recording in which he told the then minister for the environment, Peter Garrett, "we're not trying to make you look stupid". In the film, Mr O'Rourke is on the receiving end of a heated phone conversation with Mr Garrett in which he tells him the government has systematically ignored scientific advice and paid inadequate attention to the severity of the fires. While the documentary is an excellent account of the history of Australian bushfires, the interviews with Mr O'Rourke and documentary makers Emma Clifton, Amelia Algar, Michael Leunig and Robert Dessaix present a picture of a minister out of his depth (or rather out of his pocket) as he desperately tries to avoid looking bad in the media and to divert attention away from the fact that he has done little or nothing to prevent the disasters that have befallen the people of Queensland in recent months. The Ages of Apocalypse is based on two series of films that the BBC produced in 2004 and 2006, which were broadcast in Britain the following year. In its new film, the corporation has been able to add to the narrative that first aired, and this has resulted in several "exposés" of how the government is treating the residents of Queensland. Before the world now knows it, the beleaguered minister stands accused of trying to avoid the blame for the disaster and of using the ABC's Geoffrey Rush as a scapegoat. The minister is reported to have said to Mr Rush: "If you were to ask me what's been the cause of this, I would answer you. That's what journalists do for a living. The problem is, I can't remember what I said." The evidence that emerges in the Age of Apocalypse is that the minister is not playing along, and was not honest in his conversation with Mr Garrett. The interviews that the documentary team have conducted with people who have experienced the fires first hand confirm that the minister has done little to prevent the disaster or to assist the afflicted residents. The fact that the newly appointed minister for

The present invention relates to a device for disinfection and/or sterilization of a rubber part such as a tire for a vehicle by treatment with a disinfecting agent. The present invention also relates to a method for disinfecting and/or sterilizing a rubber part of a vehicle using the device. Rubber parts of vehicle tires, valves and the like must be maintained in sterile conditions so as to prevent infection caused by moisture or foreign particles. However, since rubber parts, etc. are generally made of organic material and contain many natural rubber compounds, they are vulnerable to high temperature and high pressure during vulcanization to destroy germs. For this reason, even though rubber parts of a vehicle tire, etc. are made in a state of germ-free, disinfecting treatment must be performed prior to vulcanization (see Japanese Patent Application Laid-Open No. 8-259954). A tire vulcanizing device disclosed in Japanese Patent Application Laid-Open No. 8-259954 includes a cylindrical first pressure chamber between a vulcanization oven and a first rubber bladder to supply and exhaust an inert gas to and from the first pressure chamber, a cylindrical second pressure chamber between a vulcanization oven and a second rubber bladder to supply and exhaust an inert gas to and from the second pressure chamber, and a first flexible hose connected to the first pressure chamber and a second flexible hose connected to the second pressure chamber. The tire vulcanizing device requires separate control devices for controlling operation of the first pressure chamber and the second pressure chamber, respectively, and thus entails a problem in that a large number of components must be used in the system. The present invention solves the problems discussed above and has an object of providing a device for disinfecting and/or sterilizing rubber parts and a method for disinfecting and/or sterilizing rubber parts which can achieve disinfection and/or sterilization in a simple structure. Another object of the present invention is to provide a device for disinfecting and/or sterilizing rubber parts which can control all chambers simultaneously.

A third object of the present invention is to provide a method for disinfecting and/or sterilizing rubber parts which can simultaneously achieve disinfection and/or sterilization of all the chambers. Still another object of the present invention is to provide a method for disinfecting and/or sterilizing rubber parts which can achieve control of the inside of a chamber at various levels. The above objects of the present invention are achieved by
